Engineers at the Hotel McAlpin last night, urged that the people of the country watch carefully the progress of military training legislation

Washington, which would be committed to a policy of ambition. He advocated a plan for compulsory military training with the establishment of a Federalized citizen army, the apnointment of officers to be localized, and subject to the War Department's standards of efficiency.

The other transfers were Captain Thomas Donohue, from the Miller Avenue.

ment of officers to be localized, and subject to the War Department's standards of efficiency.

"I think the Baker bill is the most iniquitous military measure I have ever seen in print," General O'Ryan said, and added that it provided for a regular professional army of 575,000 men and an appropriation of $880, 000,000, eight maths of which would be spent on the training staff, and the rest on the young men that the bill requires to take military training. General O'Ryan predicted the bill would have little chance of adoption. He said further that modern warfare now has little relation to the professional army, and that an efficient force of six million men could be raised by the citizen army plan within three years. He advocated a three months' training period, with three years active and three years reserve status, with each man responsible for equipment and subject to inspection at stated intervals. This plan would bring the cost to the nation (ar below the present sum of $1,350, which is spent and subject to the Marion (ar below the present sum of $1,350, which is spent and supported to the proposed of the downtown district, from the Butler Street station to the Butler Street station to the Butler Street precinct; Captain Frank A. The system of training reserve of ficers won high praise from General O'Ryan. When he declared that General Leonard Wood deserved entire trend for the plan, the audience interrupted with applause.

At a business meeting the association passed a resolution recommending salary increases for the technical employes of the city, varying from 20 percent for the highest paid to 73 percent for the lowest paid. These proposed increased would amount to $1,446,000, Alexander Potter, president of the association, conducted the meeting.
